No matter what his overbearing duke of a grandfather wants, Thomas Goddard has no intention of marrying a high-born lady. He s the son of Danby s by-blow, for heaven s sake, and no gentleman! When yet another letter-complete with yet another marriage license-arrives, Thomas does as any reasonable man would do. He rips the thing to shreds, tosses it over the cliffs, and curses Danby s name. Regrettably, his shouted curse startles the very lady his grandfather intends for him to marry. Because of her wayward brother s numerous and repeated indiscretions, Lady Matilda Bexley-Smythe has just endured yet another Season on the receiving end of both salacious gossip and censorious glances. She s had all of London Society she can stand, so she intends to find a husband who is unconcerned about her brother s ne er-do-well behavior. She settles on the seemingly perfect choice-a gentleman unswayed by gossip-but when Mattie finds herself being carried home in a handsome stranger s arms, her whole world unravels at the seams.
