Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Over the past 10 years, there have been three major test programs exploring realistic electrical functionality of electrical cables under fire conditions. The three programs were: The Electric Power Research Institute (EPRI) and the Nuclear Energy Institute (NEI), 2002 Comprehensive research and test efforts undertaken jointly by EPRI and NEI to investigate, characterize, and quantify fire-induced circuit failures. NRC Cable Response to Live Fire (CAROLFIRE), 2008 CAROLFIRE was started at the end of the EPRI/NEI test program. It provides an experimental basis for resolving five of the six items identified as Bin 2 circuit configurations in Regulatory Issue Summary (RIS) 2004-003, Risk-Informed Approach for Post-Fire Safe-Shutdown Circuit Inspections. Improved fire modeling tools for the prediction of cable damage under fire conditions. NRC Direct Current Electrical Shorting in Response to Exposure Fire (DESIREE-FIRE), 2012 Provides fire-induced cable failures modes and effects data for dc-powered control circuits. Corresponding EPRI and U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) technical reports document the test results; however, only the EPRI tests provided an evaluation of various parameters affecting the likelihood of cable failure modes. However, these evaluations were based on a limited set of test data (18 tests). Since then, NRC-sponsored testing has added several hundred data points on the electrical failure characteristics of electrical cable exposure to severe thermal conditions. Evaluating these and other parameters using all available test data would improve understanding of the effects of various parameters on cable failure modes. During an electrical expert Phenomena Identification and Ranking Table (PIRT) meeting in 2011, it became apparent that having individual experts independently analyze the three data sets to derive conclusions to support the PIRT was inefficient and impractical. Thus, the NRC, with...
